For the sake of humanity is a collection of essays in honour of Clemens Nathan, a man occupying a remarkable position in the public life of the United Kingdom over a period of several decades. He has stimulated and facilitated discussion, research and study on a striking array of topics including international organisations, human rights, interfaith relations and the Holocaust and German Jewish history, as well as in his own area of professional expertise, textile science and technology. His approach has been characterised by academic rigour, social concern and a commitment to historical truth, along with an adventurous and innovative spirit. All these qualities are also to be found in this collection of essays by his friends and admirers, to produce a truly fascinating book with new insights into many topics and a number of chapters destined to become classics in their fields. Above all, it is an erudite and charming volume full of surprises.

Stephen Darwall expands upon his argument for a second personal framework for morality in which morality entails mutual accountability and the authority to address demands. He explores the role of the framework in relation to cultural ideas of respect and honor, the development of modern moral philosophy and interpersonal relations.

Andre Beteille, one of India's leading sociologists and writers, is particularly well known for his studies of the caste system in South India. What is perhaps not much known is that he started writing about his early life some years ago, and indeed four of these pieces about his two grandmothers' childhood in Chandernagore and then schooling in Calcutta (now Kolkata) have been published. Few academics of his stature have written about their early lives, and yet there are many stories and anecdotes waiting to be told. This volume of writings on childhood and school days, subjects close to Andre Beteille, is a special offering by a few of his friends, colleagues and admirers to mark his seventy-fifth birthday. The volume, focusing on remembered childhood, includes twelve essays by leading sociologists, anthropologists, historians and literary figures: Alan Macfarlane, Aparna Basu, Gopalkrishna Gandhi, Gurcharan Das, Jan Breman, Malavika Karlekar, Pradip Kumar Bose, Susan Visvanathan, Rudrangshu Mukherjee, Tapan Ray Chaudhuri, T. N. Madan and Veena Das. Rich in detail and feeling, these real life stories, told in different styles and registers, can be read at many levels. At one level, they are entertaining, pleasing and even amusing; at another, they provide insights into varied childhoods from men and women today, aged between the mid-fifties and early eighties. Each essay is also accompanied by 3-4 photographs, enhancing the visual appeal of the book. The volume also includes an introduction by Malavika Karlekar and Rudrangshu Mukherjee.

A brilliant, sometimes unsettling look at how ancient codes of honor figure in the social discomforts of everyday life.
